Capture of Prisoners and Guns!

Large Amount of Cotton Discov'rd.
FROM NEW ORLEANS.
New York, April 1.—The steamer Cahaba, from New Orleans, has arrived here. Franklin, Louisiana, has been evacuated.

Franklin, Louisiana, has been evacuated, and the Government store removed to Brashear City. The Era says that on the 21st Gen. Mower made a reconnaissance up Red River to Natchitoches, 6 miles above Alexandria, and flanked the rebel force, capturing 200 prisoners and 4 guns. Refugees from there state that a large quantity of cotton &c. was retained on the plantations in that vicinity.

Gen. Franklin's column has passed through Apalachicola.

Gen. Banks issued an order establishing a bureau of instruction for freedmen.

The capture of Natchitoches had a depressing effect on the cotton market, and considerable receipts are expected from that region.

COUGHS AND COLDS.

The sudden changes of our climate are sources of FEVERS, BRUISES, and ACUTE AFFECTIONS. Experience has long proved that simple remedies often act most powerfully when taken in the early stages of the disease, resemble a child at once led to Brown's Diarrhoea Treater, or Lozenges, let the Cough, Croup, or Irritation of the Throat be ever so slight, as by this precaution a more serious attack may be effectually ward-off. PNEUMONITIS and BRUISES will find them

THE LIGHTER BURDEN.

BY T. S. ARTHUR.

A pleasant family-room. Time, evening. From the small, round, shoulder-lunged, a drop-light over a counter-table covered with books. The warm air comes in through an open register, giving to the apartment a genial summer temperature. The room is not large, nor is the furniture costly. Every thing is plain, but good and comfortable. Three young children, who have closed their evening game of romps, have just passed out with their mother—it is their bed time—and the father sits alone. A few minutes ago smiles lit up his face, caught from the children's playfulness; but those smiles have faded; a cloud has dropped down over his countenance; he is gloomy and troubled.

Thus sat Mr. Catherwood, when his wife returned from the chamber where she had left her children in the hope of angels. Her heart was light; but a hand seemed laid upon her bosom the moment she came back into her husband's presence. A feeling of care and anxiety oppressed her. She looked earnestly at her husband, and saw that his brow was clouded.

"What troubles you?" she asked. "I hope nothing has gone wrong?"

"Everything is going wrong!" Mr. Catherwood answered. "How we are to make both ends meet, is more than I can tell. Coal has gone up to twelve dollars a ton."

"To twelve dollars?"

"Yes; and everything else in proportion. Food, clothing, taxes, nearly all double what they were—and to day I received notice that our rent would be raised from four to five hundred dollars."

Mrs. Catherwood drew a quick sighing breath.

"To five hundred dollars?" she responded, in a tone of her face growing deeper.

"Yes; but it was all," said her husband, "we might get along easily enough. It is the advance of every item of our household expenditure that is going to break us down."

"Don't say break us down, Henry!" Mrs. Catherwood's voice was choked.

"I do say break us down," he replied, with a fretful emphasis. "What is to hinder? Everything breaks down when the burden goes beyond the strength."

"We must begin to limit ourselves," said Mrs. Catherwood. "We must lighten the burden by throwing out all superfluities, and even some of our comforts. Better this, than to break down."

"I wish the war was over," Mr. Catherwood spoke with a gloomy impatience. "If it goes on much longer, we shall have nothing left."

"I think," answered Mrs. Catherwood, in a gentle suggestive tone, "that compared with many others, the war, so far, has touched us very lightly. We have not suffered the abridgement of a single comfort."

"The abridgement is to come. It is on our door," said Mr. Catherwood. "And, if the war continues, it will go on and on, until absolute want stares us in the face."

"If need be that we suffer for our country, let us do so patiently," replied Mrs. Catherwood, who was of a more hopeful disposition than her husband. She had already risen above the depressing influence of his state. "In any event, our circumstances are such that we shall never be called to suffer even a tithe of the pain that will be laid on thousands of stricken hearts. And if our portion of the common burden be so very light in comparison with our neighbor's burden, is it well for us to complain? With so much left to be thankful for, is it not a sin to murmur? I thought of the starving Union prisoners at Richmond, as I sat at our plentiful table this evening; of the fathers there who left children at home as dearly loved as ours; of husbands there, whose wives weep for their bitter and unavailing tears. Oh, Henry! for us to complain, is sin!"

Mr. Catherwood made no reply to this, dropped his eyes from his wife's face, and looked down upon the floor. Thought went to the starving prisoners at Richmond, to the homeless men, women and children who were suffering, to the exile for love of country, to the thousands who had sacrificed their all; to the sick and wounded in hospitals; to the sorrowing ones centered all over the country who mourned their loved and lost. He felt rebuked.

The door of the room was opened with a jerk, and a servant came in. Her manner was excited.

"What's wanted?" asked Mrs. Catherwood.

"They've sent for you next door," Mrs. Catherwood started to her feet.

"Is anything wrong there?" she asked, alarmed by the servant's tone and appearance.

"Yes, ma'am, they've got bad news, and Mrs. Lester has fainted away."

"News from Captain Lester?"

"Yes, ma'am. They say he's killed!" Mrs. Catherwood struck her hands together, and uttered an exclamation of surprise and pain.

"When did it happen?" asked Mr. Catherwood. He spoke with forced calmness. His face had become pale.

"They didn't tell me, sir. The girl was all in a flurry, and said, 'Please ask Mrs. Catherwood to come right in.'"

No delay occurred. Without stopping for shawl or hood, Mrs. Catherwood ran to her afflicted neighbor. Mr. Catherwood followed soon after, thinking that he might be of some use. The learned that a dispatch had been received announcing the death of Capt. Lester in Western Virginia, and that Mrs. Lester had fainted at receiving the intelligence, and was still insensible. Two children, a boy and a girl, one six and the other eight years of age, came with noisless step into the parlor. On seeing Mr. Catherwood they paused with timid air. He held out his hands, and they came and sat down on the sofa, one on each side, and leaned their heads against him. There was something wrong in the house. Their mother was ill, suddenly and strangely. No tongue yet had uttered the fact truth in their ears. They did not know that their mother was fatherless. But they felt the chill and shadow of impending evil. Mr. Catherwood's heart grew faint and his eyes wet. He could not trust his voice to speak to the children; but he put his arms around them.

"Mamma's sick," said the little girl, looking up at Mr. Catherwood with a sober face, he drew her, with a tender, pitying impulse, to his side.

"I'm very sorry," responded the boy. "But the doctor's coming, and he'll make her well," he added in a tone of confidence.

Alas for the unhappy mother! Her was a sickness beyond the skill of any mortal physician. Time only, with God's mercy and loving kindness, could heal the hurt of her soul.

Mr. Catherwood did not reply, though he felt that the little troubled heart beside him was waiting for some responsive assurance from his lips.

Vague sorrows do not rest heavily on the hearts of young children. The unconscious orphans, up later than their usual hours, were presently asleep, leaning against Mr. Catherwood. Their nurse came in and took them away. How his heart yearned toward these children—suddenly left fatherless. He thought of his own little ones, still within the sphere of his protecting love; of his wife, still lean-

FRIDAY, APRIL 1, 1864.

FROM MADISON.

The Republican Union State Convention which met in this city yesterday, was one of the largest and most respectable political gatherings that ever assembled in the State of Wisconsin. Two hundred and fifty-eight votes were cast, and but very few of them were thrown by substitutes; nor were there many office holders present as Delegates in the Convention. This is as it should be, as there is always more or less repugnance felt against those who hold place under an Administration, if they mingle too freely in assemblages of this character.

It was no doubt a wise proceeding to give Governor Salomon a place at the head of the delegation of the State at large. This was due the ex-Governor, not only for his eminent fitness for the position, and as a reward for his valuable public services to the Union cause, but for the reason that a considerable portion of his countrymen would feel gratified and modified by his appointment. The other appointments are all excellent ones.

The reading of the resolutions was received with applause. They were published on yesterday in the GAZETTE, and are so sound and eminently proper that they need no eulogy from our hands. They are all nuts which the copperhead faction will find meat in if they will only crack them.

The resolution instructing the delegates to go for Mr. Lincoln, was not sound in the opinion of many, after the very emphatic and hearty endorsement which the convention had just given him; but the whole assemblage was so enthusiastic for Old Abe that I suppose they couldn't well help it. I hope they will not regret it in June.

MURDER AND SUMMARY EXECUTION.—A citizen was shot dead on the 11th near Black Jack, Kansas, for his money. Mr. J. M. Hays and some three others started in pursuit. The murderers were followed to the encampment of a part of 11th Kansas, near Lanesfield. Mr. Hays and those with him informed the commander of the company, and the villains were detected, arrested and put under guard. Their names are W. H. Wagner, J. Hannegan and Miller. The next day Wagner and Hannegan were tried by a court martial and found guilty, and sentenced to be shot. They were executed on Thursday at the camp, near Lanesfield. Miller is still in custody, and will probably be handed over to the civil authorities for trial.

—The Dayton, (O.) Journal tells a queer story of a young man, "handsome, intelligent and gifted," who was the owner of a deformed leg. This affliction became a source of morbid dejection, and he finally determined to correct the deformity or die in the attempt. A surgeon was consulted, the crippled limb amputated and a handsome cork one substituted. The young man survives, a living monument of pluck and vanity.

On Wednesday last, says the Ogdenburg Journal, the St. Lawrence river from the Lighthouse up as far as the eye can reach, was closed with ice. A few days before it was all open water, with a fair prospect of early navigation. From the Lighthouse down, the river was open, and the ferry steamers performed their accustomed trips.

—George L. Pugh, of Ohio, the bosom friend of Vallandigham, has declined the "honor" of candidacy for Senatorial Elector on the copperhead ticket; doubtless to open a place for his friend, the traitor, who "waits and watches on the border" for Mr. Pugh at the head of his two hundred thousand.

—A Milwaukee banker, for lack of something better to do, has commenced a drive or two with sundry arithmetical calculations concerning a national debt of four thousand millions—from which it appears that if our obligations should ever reach that respectable number of dollars, the column of dollars would be five thousand and five hundred and seventy and two-fifths miles in height; that it would take one hundred and thirty-eight thousand eight hundred and eighty-eight tons to carry the silver, allowing one ton to each; and that the length of the line of teams would be three hundred and ninety-four miles.

—A remarkably deliberate case of suicide occurred in Missouri a few days ago. Mrs. Jane Bartlett, of the town of Charleston, shot herself through the heart with a pistol, incited thereto by "incapability of temper" between herself and her husband, leaving three letters, in one of which she expressed her desire to be laid out in her wedding garments, and designated the kind of coffin she wished. It also appears that before shooting herself, she arranged everything in her room in perfect order, removing her shoes and crumpling, and placing a wash-basin, soap and towel on lounge where she died. She was only twenty-one years old.

—The "Paw-Paws" in Missouri, who are just now amusing themselves by persecuting and murdering defenseless Union men, are a military organization—created under the authority of the Gamble provision of the Missouri Constitution, and designated in the election last fall, but really to put arms in the hands of disloyal men. A committee of the Missouri Legislature has prepared a strong report against them, which, with corroborative testimony, will soon be printed.

—A Boston paper suggests the organization of "a grand Lord Ladies' League," composed of women who are willing to pledge themselves to maintain, while this war lasts, a decent economy in their attire." In connection with this, it is interesting to know that the Merrimac Print Works are about to resume operations, so that calico will once more be cheaper than delaines. These print-works have been closed nearly two years.

—The Paris Charivari has a caricature of John Bull in convulsions of grief by the side of the British lion, crouching like a cur, with a keel, labeled "Schleswig-Holstein," fastened to his tail. Mr. Bull is explaining that the lion is "bien malade."

Things to be Remembered.

First, That it is a positive business necessity to have your buildings, merchandise and other personal property insured against fire.

Second, That E. L. Dimock now has the agency of nearly all the Sound Old Eastern Insurance Companies that are represented in the west, and that the capital represented by these companies is sufficient to do all the insurance for Janeville and Rock County.

Third, That these companies are noted for adjusting losses fairly and paying them promptly.

Fourth, That E. L. Dimock has left a few more of those beautiful calendars for 1864, blotting pads and excise laws for distribution to customers.

A CARD.—In October last, my dwelling house was entirely consumed by fire. It was insured in the Continental of New York for $600, which amount was promptly paid to me by their agent, Mr. E. L. Dimock.

Wm. Bemis.

Janeville, March 28th, 1864.

ANOTHER CARD.—On the 27th day of Jan'y last, my dwelling house, in the 4th ward of this city was destroyed by fire. It was insured in the Continental of New York by E. L. Dimock for $600, which amount he was authorized to and did pay at once on receipt of the necessary proofs of loss.

Janeville, Mar. 28, '64.

STILL ANOTHER CARD.—On the 28th day of Feb'y last, my house was destroyed by fire. My furniture, which was insured by Mr. E. L. Dimock, in the Home of N. Y., was more or less damaged.

The amount of such damage being ascertained, was promptly paid by Mr. Dimock.

Janeville, Mar. 28, 1864.

AND YET ANOTHER.—I had on board of the propeller Tancredia, which was sunk some months since, in Buffalo Harbor, an invoice of groceries which were insured by E. L. Dimock, in the Home Insurance Company of New York for Five Thousand, Six Hundred Dollars. Immediately on presentation of my claim the full sum insured was paid.

C. H. CONRAD.
